To me the most enthralling thing is the study of the stars. Galaxies, nebulae, planets too. Like Venus, Saturn, Mars. Fascinating also are the constellations, all; As Orion, Cassiopeia.

The dippers, large and small. Almost every night is seen The shiny, glowing moon. And too, sometimes, it rises high In bright mid-afternoon. Comets, meteors, shooting stars. Have oft been seen by all. And a wondrous spectacle it is To see these flashes fall.

Many curious things are learned In sojourns suns afar. But none compare in beauty With the glory of a star.

The more the marble wastes, the more the statue grows.
