

By Darius Dragon

Coff, coff! Ahem, pause... Way back when I was young, we didn't carry on as these young people do today. All my friends were upstanding sorcerers and witches, and we never went out after six in the morning. The only things we did (all innocent), were burning outlying farms and roasting a vagrant knight or two. None of this vicious stuff for us. I was accosted in the passageway of this institution a fortnight ago and solicited! My word! The journeyman evidently wanted shillings for the coffers of some dark, mystic society housed within these castle walls. I did away with him only to find another from another cause. To my regret I found myself besieged by a horde of money-mongers. Seemingly, every varlet in the shire heard of my prodigality and was there to see that I did it right. If all of the potions and remedies that these guilds sold were added together, the result would surely be in excess of that which any yeoman could buy, at today's salaries. 'Tis too much... the leechers drain you of your blood, so why again? On Allhallows Eve I was privileged to be present at the opening of a grave. What thinkest thou? No one was home. We all had a big hearse-laugh. Now you see that I just spend my time banging around. Peace be with you.

Senior Spotlight

Tall Ivy Leaguer

You have probably already guessed our first senior spotlighted this issue. Yes, it's 6'4" David Lee Hudson, from San Diego, California. Dave is a fervent Ivy Leaguer; he likes basketball, swimming, Wright Patterson AFB, Ohio, being a senior, and Kay.

He dislikes conventional clothing, Texas, being away from the States, and girls who dye and bleach their hair. After finishing college, he wants to be a beatnik for a year, and then become an automotive engineer. Dave's greatest desire is to go back to "Wright Pat" to see the old gang.

T-Bird Fan

Myra McCall, a 5'7 $\frac{3}{4}$ " blonde, claims Trenton, N.J., as her home.

Myra likes spaghetti, basketball, T-birds, horses, clothes, Reno, and dancing.

Like everyone else, she dislikes snobbish people. More of her pet peeves are peroxided hair, Texas, weird colored skirts and blouses, stag parties (because she can't go), and P.E.

She has three secret desires. They are: to be famous, to have black hair, and to go to Chicago.

Elsewhere and Elsewhen

Imagine frying one hundred hamburgers a day! That's just what happens every day in the Johnson High School Snack Bar. Between seven and ten dozen buns are used.

The snack bar also offers a variety of sandwiches and cakes, and such beverages as cokes and milk are available. Cokes are more popular; it estimated that 350 or more are sold daily.

Ever heard of a study hall without a teacher? Students at Maine Township High School West, Des Plaines, Illinois, are inaugurating an honor study room, run by student council members.

At first only juniors and seniors will be allowed to use the room. Any student who received any grade lower than a C on his final semester report card last year will be immediately ineligible to use the honor room.

"The honor study system has been an experiment in many of our nation's leading schools," states the student council president. "In all cases where the students showed cooperation, the idea has been a success."

Some of us say join the Navy and see the world. Jane Williams says join the Williams family and see the world. Having lived on a 132-foot, 338-ton ship for five years, she should know. Just how did she get into this situation? asks the Naples Italy's Cat's Track, a U.S. Navy dependent school paper.

Until 1954, she lived in a house just like anyone else. Then her father, a British Royal Force commander, tired of having to pack each time they moved. So they bought a ship! The Toma II, a large sailing vessel, was "Home Sweet Home" for them for three years. Recently, the Adventuress, which is presently docked in Mergellina, has become the Williams' abode.

The family has sailed to France, Spain, Greece, Turkey, and finally Italy, where they have set up light boat-keeping.

Club Hub-bub

Pep Club

The Pep Club is selling patches for club members and working on skits for pep assemblies. Plans for the football and baseball banquets given annually by the club are being discussed at the meetings.

Science Club

John Foren became president of the Science Club at the first meeting. Tim Stinson is vice-president, and Anne Courtright was elected secretary-treasurer. They plan to have an affiliation with the National Science Foundation, participate in a science fair that will be held in early March, and take field trips during the year.

Hiking Club

The members of the club have taken only one hike and climbed a mountain. They plan to take an over-night trip sometime soon.

Chess Club

The president of the Chess Club is John Foren, Jack McCue is vice-president, and secretary is Anne Courtright. The members plan to take part in a tournament after Thanksgiving. During the meetings they play chess on a basis of challenge.

Stamp Club

Members exhibit and trade stamps among each other at their meetings. They have had a display of U.N. stamps so far this year.

National Honor Society

The new president of the National Honor Society is Betty Nakamura, vice-president is Sue Hahney, Margaret Hara is secretary, and treasurer is Tom McLean.

The Society plans to have two inductions this year, one each semester.

The Dragon's Roar is published monthly by the journalism class at Narimasu High School, Tokyo area, Japan. Address: 6000th Support Wing, OL No. 3, Box 22, APO 99, San Francisco, Calif. The Dragon's Roar is a member of Quill and Scroll and Columbia Scholastic Press Association. Copies are available for 10 cents each or by subscription to the school's year-book.

Editor-in-Chief: Bill McCain
Page One Editor: Terry Milne
Page Two Editor: Marlene Wolcott
Page Three Editor: Jeany Tarui
Page Four Editor: Grant Williams
Exchange Editor: Julaine Wolcott
Reporters: Jill Collings, Jacquie Lash, Sheila Tippins, Tim Stinson, Shigemi Tanaka, Elaine Tarui, Norm Nishihira, Harry Hallman, Milt Cooper, Dawn Mastin.
Photographers: Terry Milne, Tim Stinson, Grant Williams.

